Company history/background

Since 2012 the company focuses on hospitals and life science companies that need their staff to be trained in GxP, such as GCP, GMP, MDR and EU CTR. Everyone involved in conducting clinical research worldwide is required to have GCP and regulatory knowledge in accordance with the guidelines of the ICH. At this moment the company provides training to the largest of Dutch hospitals and research centres, various European life science companies and is prepared to expand in Europe.

The company is active in providing (online and blended) tailor-made clinical research (GxP) training courses for doctors, nurses and research professionals in the life science industry.

Unique selling points

The company is pretty unique as they offer interactive and engaging GxP trainings via a continuous learning method, ensuring better knowledge retention directly impacting quality of clinical research and reducing risks. As such it's an innovator in its industry.

Other

The current shareholders feel that they are not the right persons to lead the company through the upcoming growth phase.
